REPORT.

To the Class.

In presenting to the Class their Fourth Report, the Secretary desires to thank those who have promptly answered the circulars sent them, and thus contributed to make the report what it is. Some members have found their time too precious to take any notice of the questions submitted, and they must not feel slighted at brief mention or occasional mistakes in what is recorded. The Secretary believes his Class is with him in wishing to make these Triennial Reports of value; and, to be of value, they must be accurate and complete. To further this end, all of the Class, both graduates and those only temporarily connected with us, are urged to keep the Secretary correctly informed as to their address, and to duly advise him of any items of general interest, as marriage, births of children, and other facts and fancies which would be desirable data for succeeding reports.

The Secretary cannot close without a word as to the record of the Class as a whole. It is distinctively a hard-working class; and it is a class that we may one and all be proud of, and appreciate to a greater degree each year the honor of our membership. When we realize that it is to the exertions and ability of each member that this position of the Class is due, it should nerve us all to a higher range of action, a more determined effort to discharge in the best manner the duties and responsibilities resting upon us, that every year may find us "increasing in wisdom and in favor of God and man."

And now, in wishing you contentment, happiness, and all the good things of this life in due season, I would ask you to notify me of any errors or omissions in this report, and assure you of my earnest endeavor to do all in my power for the good and welfare of our dear old Class at Harvard.

Very truly your friend and classmate,

W. L. CHASE, Secretary.

FRANK EUGENE CHASE, born at Boston, March 16, 1856, writes: —

"I do not return the printed form which you sent me, for the simple but valid reason that it is gotten up solely for the benefit of lawyers and married men; and I am neither, thank God! Neither have I taken any degrees, nor have I any address save P. O. Box 2846, Boston, the accuracy of which I am prepared to guarantee for any length of time. I was always nomadic in my domestic habits; and this peculiarity has, most unfortunately, extended itself to the commercial life which circumstances have forced upon me, rather, I confess it, against my will. I may say that the life of elegant leisure formerly led by me, and described so eloquently by yourself in past reports, now exists only in the form of an historical truth. It cost me a good deal of money to learn the fact, that I was not, as I had always erroneously supposed, a great financier, and that it required something more than original genius and inherited funds to successfully cope with the intricacies of the stock market. To translate this into plain American, — I went into a financial decline some two years ago, from which I have never recovered. I suffer from great emaciation of income and fatty degeneration of gastronomic and sartorial habits, but retain my accustomed cheerfulness, even in decay, in an exaggerated form. Having reduced my pile so that I could see over it with the naked eye, I beheld starvation standing on the other side. Terrified by this unaccustomed sight, I took refuge in the subscription-book business, not as a book-agent (God forbid!), but as the guiding mind and instructor of this eighth plague. Had I known as much of the business then as I do now, I would have embraced starvation with cheerfulness. I deprived this branch of industry of my services in September, 1884, after twelve months' incarceration, and went into the European Express business. I tilled this field of commercial endeavor with characteristic industry until March, 1885, when I was asked to resign. Crushed by this last ignominy, I abjured commerce, and for six months endeavored to get an income out of journalistic literary work. I had long been an occasional contributor to Puck, and the rest of the humorous weeklies, and a builder of lurid tales for a class of weekly story-papers which probably lie far below your literary ken. ('Ken' is a word I use considerably in such stories. It escaped me by mistake.) I had, too, a large and valuable patent-medicine and soap connection, the result of my great commercio-literary success, The Lay of the Lonesome Lung, and out of all these proposed to make both ends meet. True, as ever, to the Class of '76, I leased a room of Alfred Bowditch, preferring that, if any one must lose by my enterprise, it should be a class-mate, and went to work. I have to record a dismal failure, partly due to the strange perversity of publishers, and partly due to confirmed habits of idleness in the writer. In October, 1885, I took the helm of a play-publishing business under the firm name of Walter H. Baker & Co., and since then have been industriously and successfully manufacturing and selling dramatic literature in its deadliest form. (For particulars, see catalogues.) Almost at the same time I took the so-called editorial desk in the publishing house of Lee & Shepard, and have been fulfilling its duties, as well, with parallel industry and success. I have, besides, continued to keep up the standard of American humor in Puck and elsewhere, and have contributed to the Century Magazine and other high-class publications a large number of advertisements of Lee & Shepard's books. I am at present, in addition to all this, contributing a weekly column of dramatic criticism and persiflage, described by the paper as a 'feuilleton,' to the Boston Sunday Courier, succeeding the late Joe Bradford. Class-mates are invited to regard this as a friendly warning.

"I think, my dear W. L., that this is the sum of my success to date. Of course, I have a novel partly finished, like everybody else; but this was done only to escape the charge of being eccentric.

"I am really curious to know what 'cut' you will find appropriate to all this."

EDWARD EVERETT PARKER. Born at Salem, Mass., Dec. 9, 1852. Writes: "I am still an actor, still a dramatic reader, still an instructor in oratory. I am just closing my eleventh season as an exponent of the various phases of expression, but more especially the department of histrionic recitation. As the years go on, I find the work harder, because the field broadens as I traverse it; but the outlook from the few heights which my perseverance enables me to climb, is always so encouraging a future, that I continue to plod along, learning ever 'to labor and to wait.' I make Everett, Mass., my business headquarters; but my engagements sometimes call me all over New England, and I have at intervals made professional visits 'out West,' and 'down South,' and in Canada. For several months past I have been in Western Maine, and have, I trust, left a fairly good reputation as an elocutionist in that section of that State. I am at present undecided whether to travel next season with theatrical combinations, or to confine myself in part to the platform as well as to the stage. I think it probable, however, that my principal duties in 1886–87 will be to teach voice-culture, and to recite at concerts. My interest in, and my regard for, the members of dear old '76, you are well aware of." Address: Everett, Mass.

An injury in the discharge of duty on the Nine necessitated his leaving college, and after a year at business he entered the School of Mines, Columbia College, New York, and graduated in 1878. Received appointment as Economic Geologist and Mineralogist on the United-States Geological and Geographical Survey of the Territories, F. V. Hayden in charge. In October, 1879, became mining-engineer of the Bonaparte Consolidated Gold and Silver Mining Company, whose properties were located in Alturas County, Idaho Territory. Built himself a log-cabin there in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, and began his first housekeeping. Remained there one year, and then returned to Cincinnati to accept appointment of instructor in metallurgy at the Cincinnati University, and taught metallurgy, crystallography, qualitative and quantitative blow-piping, and assaying. Resigned; and in February, 1882, went to Mexico in the interest of New York and Cincinnati investors. As a scientist has done a good deal of close work, and discovered the element boron in a sample of iron ore from Michigan; also a new method of assaying platinum ores and alloys, published in The Engineering and Mining Journal, also in The London Chemical News in 1879, and read before the American Institute of Mining Engineers at their meeting in Baltimore the same year. He has discovered a new mineral, which he has yclept gunnisonite, analyses and description of which are published in The Chemical Journal (Remson). He has, besides, been engaged in further experiments and investigations of a scientific character. Writes: "I returned again to the Republic of Mexico with headquarters at Pinos, State of Zacatecas, in the capacity of engineer and metallurgist in charge of two groups of mines, — one at Pinos, the other at Ramos in the State of San Luis Potosi. After occupying this position for a year I returned to the United States, and have since been chiefly engaged in original research work in which chemistry has played an important part. While in Mexico I discovered another new mineral which I have called 'Ramosite' from the locality near which it was found. I read a description of this mineral before the American Institute of Mining Engineers in February, 1884, and the article appears in the Transactions of the Institute for that year. I have also contributed a monograph upon the metal iridium, and compiled a bibliography of the literature bearing upon that metal, which appeared in The London Chemical News, beginning, I think, with the issue of Feb. 2, 1885, and continuing through three numbers. It was also simultaneously published in The School of Mines Quarterly. I have recently perfected some improved processes connected with the cotton-seed oil industry; an automatic detector of marsh-gas or fire-damp in mines, by which an alarm is sounded in the superintendent's office above ground; and a new single-liquid, open-circuit galvanic battery, which is constant, atmospheric oxygen being utilized as a depolarizer. My permanent address continues to be 238 Auburn Avenue, Cincinnati."

EDWARDS ROBERTS. Born at Andover, Mass., June 11, 1855. Since last report, writes: "I have led a roving life as correspondent of Boston Herald, New-York Post, Philadelphia Press, and San Francisco Chronicle. In the last few years have visited every State and Territory in the Union; have studied old Mexico from the platform of a railway car, and while riding a burro over the cacti-grown plains of our sister republic; have seen Alaska and British Columbia. I feel at home among the orange-groves of Florida, and know the by-ways leading to the glaciers of Alaska. There are few topics I have not wrestled with. Have been called to sharp account by the editors of Mormon papers, and told by Presbyterian editors that I am 'one who evidently never says his prayers nor reads the Bible;' and this because I said the Mormons were a bad lot, and the missionaries in Alaska were frauds.

"In 1885 entered the literary ranks, by publishing With the Invader, — a study of the South-West. My own reviews of the little book were all favorable; others were not. But the Critic was kind, and so were the English papers. The Paris Geographical Society asked for a copy, and, in return, furnished me — cost 2 f. — a vote of thanks passed by the society, and invited me to enter my name as honorary member. The fame my book brought me was about equal to the money I received for it. Members of '76 who are authors can readily estimate the profits from my 'child of observation.'

"In the spring of '85 appeared in Boston as public lecturer: subject, 'New Mexico to Alaska.' The illustrations, thrown on a 10 x 12 canvas, were so good that I made a success, and now have 'other engagements' for the coming year. Early in '86 wrote Gogebec, — a pamphlet descriptive of the Lake-Superior country, — which was sold to a railway, and issued in a modest 50,000 edition. At all times have written for my papers, and for such magazines as Harper's, Outing, Overland, etc., now on one subject and now on another. At present am a roving correspondent, with headquarters at Santa Barbara, Cal. Expect to visit Japan the coming summer, and to go once more to Mexico and Alaska. Have now in press a book on Southern California ('Santa Barbara and Around There'), which will be published in Boston next month, and am engaged on a series of articles for Harper's. In the fall return to Boston for an indefinite time."

Address: Boston, Mass.

NECROLOGY.

We shall cherish the remembrance of the pure and noble life of Francis Minot, so modest and unassuming, and yet so strong and earnest in high purposes; and his memory, as his presence was always, will be a rebuke to all evil, and encouragement to all good.

Associated with our Class for only the Senior year, and of a quiet and retiring disposition, Edmund Trowbridge Hastings was perhaps not so generally known; but he possessed sterling qualities that endeared him greatly to his friends, and his sudden death was a painful shock to the whole Class.

The death of John Elliott Wetherbee cut short a career of positive usefulness, and probably no man had so developed or begun to better earn respect for his talents. In his position as instructor and lecturer in the Boston University Law School, he had won an honored place, not only for his attainments, but for his earnest enthusiasm in encouraging the students under him, and his hearty readiness to spend himself in assisting those who came across any difficulties. This course, involving great strain, finally broke his health, and caused his death.

While on a fishing-trip in September, 1882, George Gilbert Blymyer lost his life in a gallant and successful attempt to save a friend.
